| The Basics --- | --- Now that you understand how to use layers, you can manipulate objects on a layer by doing any of the following: * Moving the object up and down on a layer * Rotating a layer or object on a layer * Resizing a layer or object on a layer * Pasting another layer or object on a layer * Combining layers to create new layers In this section, you get an understanding of these techniques and how to apply them with and without using a background. In addition, I show you how to apply masking to your image, allowing you to make changes to your image while keeping the rest of the image safe. In Chapter 4, I explain layers and the multiple techniques you can use to manipulate them. In Chapter 6, I show you how to move, copy, cut, and paste images in your images. Chapter 8 shows you how to resize or crop your image and teaches you how to use the Zoom tool to zoom in on an area of your image. Chapter 9 provides more detailed information on layers, including how to manipulate them and create a new layer for your image. Changing Backgrounds Suppose you want to use a background in your image. You can use three different methods to select a background: * Make a selection from the Background layer * Make a selection from the Layers panel * Add a background layer Making a selection from the Background layer The easiest way to select a background is to make a selection from the Background layer. To make a selection from the Background layer: 1. Select the Background layer in the Layers panel. 2. Choose Select ⇒ Modify, in the Tools panel. (You can also press Ctrl+Alt+click+drag in the Layers panel.) The Select menu opens. The Select menu opens. 3. Click the Background layer in the Layers panel. Your image and the Background layer are selected. 4. Press and hold Ctrl while clicking in the image. The image and the Background layer are deselected, leaving the Background layer selected. (See Chapter 4 for more information on using selections.) Making a selection from the Layers panel You can also select a background by making a selection from the Layers panel. To make a selection from the Layers panel: 1. Select the Background layer.

Cortical representation of the triceps surae muscles in humans: a magnetic stimulation study. In humans, the cortical representation of muscles involved in the locomotor task (e.g. calf muscles) is well defined. However, little is known about the sensory and motor representation of muscles acting as antagonists (e.g. calf and triceps surae muscles). We used magnetoencephalography to identify brain areas activated by the subliminal and supraliminal stimulation of the gastrocnemius (GC) and soleus (LS) muscles in six normal young adults. We found that cortical representation of the GC and LS muscles are similar, with few differences between supraliminal and subliminal stimulations. Stimulation of the LS muscle evoked a greater activation of the sensorimotor cortex, and a greater number of dipoles located in areas M1 and PMd compared with the GC muscle. This study shows that the motor representation of the triceps surae muscles is similar to that of the calf muscles, suggesting the existence of a functional, cortical organization of the components of the lower limb, possibly used in the control of posture, standing, gait and locomotor behavior in humans.

Beal & Holt Beal & Holt was an English rowing and yachting club. It was founded in Battersea as a rowing club in 1886. The club changed its name to Beal & Holt Yacht Club in 1895. Beal & Holt began to race yachts as a Great Britain club in 1887 and became a Great Britain & Ireland rowing club in 1888. It combined with the Royal Naval Yacht Club to form the Beal, the Holt and the Royal Yacht Club in 1900. In the 1890s Beal & Holt was a Royal Yacht Club competitor in the Diamond Challenge Sculls and won the cup in 1896. It was runner-up in 1899 and 1900. The Beal, Holt & Royal Yacht Club was dissolved in 1968.
