Interaction of the N-terminal domain of Escherichia coli cystathionine beta-lyase with the catalytic domain modulates its allosteric behavior. The nature of the interdomain interactions between the catalytic and regulatory domains of Escherichia coli cystathionine beta-lyase has been investigated. The inhibition of the catalytic activity of the enzyme by the C-terminal domain, which occurs at low pH, has been used as a measure of the kinetics of the enzyme-catalyzed transamination reaction, as defined by the enzyme's substrate, L-homoserine. The pH dependence of the apparent Michaelis-Menten constant of the enzyme for this substrate suggests that the activity of the C-terminal domain on the enzyme's kinetic activity is the result of long-range regulation of the enzyme, which affects the affinity of the enzyme for its substrate. This long-range interaction appears to be the consequence of a complex intermolecular interaction, which involves the C-terminal domain of the enzyme and its secondary structure. When the C-terminal domain is immobilized, its effect on the kinetics of the enzyme-catalyzed reaction is lost, demonstrating that the regulatory domain is only correctly oriented toward the catalytic domain when it is free in solution. This phenomenon is specific to the

While it is not going to replace the traditional idea of schools having security, how cool would it be to go to class during finals, knowing you might see an intruder waiting in the hallway? There is something to be said for thinking outside the box. Something to be said for being bold. For being a daredevil. Could this maybe be the new ski mask?
