If it's not the Wimbledon grass, it's none of your business Is there anything more meaningless than a sporting event being played on Wimbledon Day? Are we watching a tennis tournament or, as Tim Pool just described on Twitter, a “yearly circle jerk”? I’m pretty sure it’s not. It’s a sport, in fact, which means it’s not all about the sport either, but the “sport” of us attempting to care so much that we emotionally invest in it. That’s not usually what it is about. Even when you care about the sport it’s usually about the characters inside of it. That’s one of the reasons it’s so hard to care for tennis players on the outside looking in. You care about them in theory, but never during their wins and never during their losses. It’s never personal, it’s never about the narrative, it’s all about the lack of narrative. And the fact that we still care about it all the
